

Global Leadership Program

FOR UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS

With the Macquarie University GLP you don't just learn global skills and understanding – you put them into practice by studying, interning, volunteering and participating in conferences, both in Australia and overseas.

As young professionals, Macquarie graduates will increasingly be working in international contexts. Against the background of globalisation – the transfer of ideas, cultures, products, media and people across national borders – you will need to understand, adapt to and practice concepts that professionals 10 years ago could not have imagined.

COLLOQUIUM SERIES

Tackle issues ranging from cross-cultural understanding to counter terrorism in the GLP Colloquium Series. Participating in

'colloquia' (meaning workshops, seminars, round tables or discussions) will introduce you to a range of international issues and provide you with a set of generic skills you can use in your professional life.

GLP DISTINGUISHED SPEAKER SERIES

Come together with all GLP students to be informed and inspired. At the GLP's annual cocktail keynote speaker event you will hear from leaders across a range of fields.

EXPERIENTIAL CREDIT

The GLP awards credit to academic and cultural experiences with an international component. Points are earned for extra-curricular leadership and cultural activities. Examples include going on a student exchange, undertaking an internship, or participating in an international event.

By engaging in a range of internationally focused activities, get real experience at applying the concepts of cross-cultural understanding, all while enhancing your resume.

Students who successfully complete the GLP receive a certificate, letter of reference and notation on their academic transcript.
